Dear Friends:

The March 18, 2014 Gubernatorial Primary Election was historic in many ways. We saw the highest number of registered voters ever recorded in suburban Cook County – 1,451,593. For the first time ever in Illinois, 17-year-olds were able to register and vote in the primary, and there was a higher percentage of Republican ballots cast than in any other gubernatorial primary. Some races, namely the U.S. Senate and Governor contests on the Republican ballot, generated keen interest, yet the majority of races were uncontested and overall turnout was its lowest ever at 16 percent.

- While overall turnout was an historic low – 16 percent – many areas exceeded the more typical gubernatorial primary turnout rate of about 25 percent. Leyden Township Precinct 12, at the Margaret J. Lange Memorial Park in Rosemont, had 48 percent turnout and New Trier Township Precinct 43, at the Winnetka Presbyterian Church in Winnetka, had 41 percent turnout.
- Of the 244 contests (Democratic and Republican), 181 were uncontested.
- A 55 percent majority of suburban Cook County voters cast Republican ballots, compared to the 2010 Gubernatorial Primary when 35 percent took Republican ballots.
- Cicero was the only township that did not see an increase in the percentage of Republican ballots cast from 2010 to 2014.
- Bruce Rauner won every one of the county's 30 suburban townships in the Republican primary, but only won 52 percent of the vote.
- Turnout was highest – 64 percent, or 113 of 176 registered voters – in Lyons Township Precinct 30, at the Village of McCook Municipal Building where an annexation referendum was on the ballot. The vote ended in a 56-56 tie and the measure failed.
- Another referendum that generated attention was in Evanston, where voters decided 64 percent to 36 percent to abolish the township government.
- A record high number of suburban Cook County residents – 1,451,593 – were registered to vote, even though approximately 271,000 voters were scrubbed from the rolls. Another 33,000 had their voting status changed from “active” to “inactive” because they did not respond to a mail canvass.

As always, this report, full election results and printable maps are available at cookcountyclerk.com.

Sincerely,

David Orr

RECORD LOW TURNOUT IN GUBERNATORIAL PRIMARY

Suburban Cook County voter turnout fell to an all-time low for a gubernatorial primary election at just 16 percent. While non-presidential years always draw fewer voters, lackluster participation can also be attributed to the absence of major Democratic primary contests and a high percentage (75%) of uncontested races.

RECORD NUMBER OF REGISTERED VOTERS

The 2014 Gubernatorial Primary had a record number of suburban Cook County registered voters. This was nearly 13,000 more voters than the previous record of 1,439,415 set in the 2010 Gubernatorial Primary.

The Cook County Clerk’s office also expunged over 271,000 voters from the rolls by utilizing various tools such as death records and the U.S. Postal Service’s National Change of Address (NCOALink) dataset.

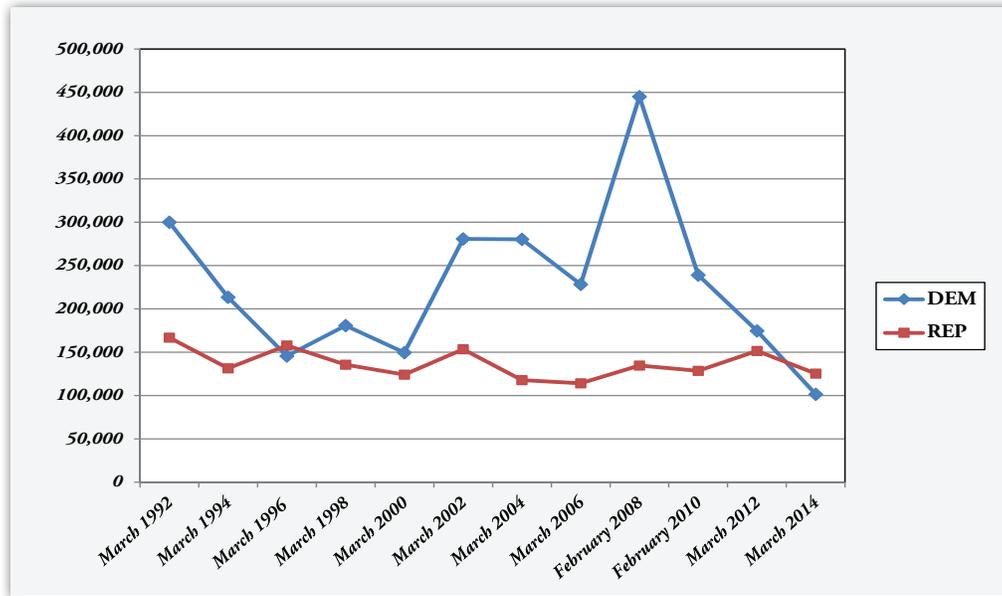

The voter rolls got a boost from 17-year-olds, who for the first time in Illinois history, could vote in a primary election if they would be 18 by the November 4, 2014 General Election. Nearly 5,500 new 17-and 18-year-old voters registered through events held at 89 suburban Cook County high schools.

In the 2010 Gubernatorial Primary Election, former GOP chairman Andy McKenna won 24 townships. In his repeat bid, Sen. Kirk Dillard again received the second highest vote tally in suburban Cook County.

TOP 25 PRECINCTS BY VOTER TURNOUT

Turnout in suburban Cook County was at an all-time low with 232,088 ballots cast, or 16 percent of registered voters. However, turnout was 294 percent greater in the top turnout precinct—Lyons 30.

Lyons Precinct 30 was the only precinct to vote on the Village of McCook referendum to annex the Pleasantview Fire Protection District—the vote ended in a 56 to 56 tie and the measure failed.

Eighteen of the top 25 voter turnout precincts pulled a majority Republican ballots, which reinforces the theory that contested Republican races at the top of the ticket motivated voters to participate.

PRE-ELECTION DAY VOTING SHOWS STEADY GROWTH

The number of voters casting ballots before Election Day in a gubernatorial primary has grown steadily from 5.1 percent when Early Voting was first introduced in 2006, to 11.1 percent in 2010 when no-excuse mail voting was implemented, to 18.6 percent in this primary. This year, the Clerk’s office successfully instituted the use of an online mail ballot application, which allowed registered voters to request a ballot by filling out a short online application instead of printing out a paper application and mailing it in. This allowed for a faster overall process for both the County and the voters. When surveyed, participants gave overwhelmingly positive feedback, finding the process both user-friendly and convenient.
