Dear Friends:

The 2012 Presidential Primary was the first presidential primary without a major Democratic contest since 1996, and the results demonstrate it. At 24 percent, overall turnout was dramatically down from 43 percent in the 2008 Presidential Primary, when there were seven candidates vying for the Democratic nomination.

This year, the Democratic vote was down 61 percent from 447,173 to 173,752 ballots cast. But the Republican vote was more robust, up 12 percent from 136,593 to 152,854 votes with a ballot featuring six candidates running for their party's presidential nomination.

- ✓ Despite the downturn in Democratic voters and uptick in Republican voters, overall ballots still tilted significantly to Democrats, at 53 percent of all ballots cast. Nearly 1 percent of voters took nonpartisan ballots.
- ✓ We found some significant economic trends, despite the low turnout. On the Republican side, Mitt Romney won every township in Cook County. A closer look at his results shows that his support was strongest in those townships with higher incomes, as determined by the U.S. Census Bureau.
- ✓ There were few close races for nominations in this primary. Four of the five closest races were referendums, all of which were electricity aggregation referendums. Fifty-five of the 66 electricity aggregation referendums on the ballot in Suburban Cook County won approval.
- ✓ The success of electricity referendums had an inverse relationship to income. That is, municipalities with higher incomes were more likely to pass a referendum which promised to save money on electric bills. Lower income communities were less likely to pass the referendum.

Precinct by precinct results are at cookcountyclerk.com to examine in greater detail. For example, in the 2nd Congressional District, incumbent Jesse Jackson won 232 of the 263 precincts in suburban Cook County. Challenger Debbie Halvorson won 31, with more than half clustering in Bloom Township. By exploring the online results you can identify other trends.

We have also enclosed a number of charts and maps illustrating the new General Assembly districts. I hope you find them enlightening.

As always, this report, full election results and many printable maps are available on our website www.cookcountyclerk.com.

Sincerely,

Romney carried suburban Cook by 57 percent overall, beating all of his opponents in every township but winning by less than 50 percent of the vote in seven townships. PARTISAN TURNOUT BY TOWNSHIP

Suburban Cook County, March 2012

While there was much talk of an increase in Republican voters and a decrease in Democratic ballots in the March 2012 primary, Democrats still voted more than Republicans in suburban Cook County. Despite the lack of a Presidential primary contest, 53 percent of all ballots pulled were Democratic. The remaining 46 percent were Republican.

- Two of the top three townships in terms of total ballots cast, Thornton and Proviso, voted overwhelmingly Democratic.
- Of thirty suburban Cook County townships, seventeen voted more Republican Party ballots than Democratic.
- Republican ballots cast in 2012 jumped to 152,854 from 136,593 in 2008, a 12 percent increase.
- Democratic ballots cast in 2012 fell to 173,752 from 447,173 in 2008, a 61 percent decrease.
- Only one township, Evanston, where 31 percent of registered voters cast ballots, had a turnout of more than 30 percent of registered voters.

ELECTRICITY AGGREGATION EARNS WIDE SUPPORT

In the March primary, communities across Cook County decided whether to act upon new state legislation allowing them to buy electricity collectively as a community, rather than as individuals. Aggregation was promoted as a cost-saving measure for these communities. Of the 66 municipalities who voted on this issue, 55 voted in favor of aggregation while 11 opposed the measure. With only two exceptions, communities with higher median income levels were more likely to support aggregation while opposition was clustered more in lower income communities where, at least in theory, the savings would have a greater impact.

(The electricity aggregation results below are ranked by median household income.)

REFERENDUMS MAKE FOR CLOSEST CONTESTS

Suburban Cook County, March 2012

This year's Presidential Primary had few hot races, but there were referendums and candidates that won by one vote or one percent of the vote. Below are the top five closest races by two measures – number of votes and margins by percentages. The smallest margins by vote and percent typically appeared on items that received the lowest turnout. Only one of the top five by vote or percent involved candidates; electricity referendums lead the way in near-split decisions.

PRE-ELECTION DAY VOTING

Suburban Cook County, March 2012

There are two major ways in which voters can cast their ballots before Election Day – via mail or in-person Early Voting.

This year was the first Presidential Primary election in which voters could vote a mail ballot without needing an excuse. While turnout was low this year, mail ballots increased by 9.4 percent from the previous Presidential Primary with 9,667 ballots this year compared to 8,835 in 2008.

Early Voting remains popular and peaked in the last four days of the process with 14,432 ballots or 38 percent of the early vote. Orland Park (6.7 percent), Northbrook (5.3 percent), and Matteson (5.2 percent) saw the highest turnout during the Early Voting period.

*NOTE: Early Voting statistics denote ballots cast at Early Voting locations in suburban Cook County as well as in-person Absentee and Grace Period Voting ballots.
